Nigerian Air Force visits 129th Rescue Wing 129th Public Affairs Office

Group Captain Son Igwe, along with members of the Nigerian Air Force, met and toured with 129th Maintenance Group personnel during their visit to the 129th Rescue Wing. Nigeria is one of California's military exchange countries.

Airmen stationed here from the 129th Rescue Wing Maintenance Group put down their wrenches to help promote democracy and build relations with their Nigerian counterparts March 1-2, 2008.

This visit marked the first engagement for the Nigerian Air Force with the California Air National Guard, said Capt. Clayton Smith, California National Guard International Affairs Specialist.

The 5-person Nigerian delegation arrived in the United States Feb. 27 for a six-day visit in California, and during their stay, the officers briefed with maintenance personnel, toured maintenance and operations facilities, and even observed a squadron change-of-command ceremony.

"We are here as part of an aircraft maintenance familiarization workshop," said Group Captain Son Igwe. "We came to understand how your logistics and maintenance operates. We've seen how information technology has aided aircraft maintenance, how you continue to improve, achieve perfection and consistency."

The Nigerian Air Force benefited from the exchange due to their own work with C-130s.

New earned income credit rules lucrative for some Airmen by Master Sgt. Scott Wagers Air Force News Agency

RAMSTEIN AIR
BASE, Germany (AFPN)
-- Filing his family's taxes each year online, Master Sgt. Ron Przy-sucha says he normally receives about $3,000 in tax returns. This year however, he was taken by surprise when the same Web site he traditionally uses calculated his return at nearly $8,000.

"I immediately thought it was a mistake and I didn't want to owe the government money so I went to the IRS Web site to verify the information for military members and it told me that there was a change in the (earned income credit ) rules," said Sergeant Przysucha, who is a television broadcaster assigned to Air Force News, Det. 4.

The tax laws affecting military taxpayers have changed significantly over the last few years, said Capt. Mary Ellen Payne, the officer in charge of the tax center at Ramstein Air Base.

"In the past, military pay allowances such as variable housing allowance and cost-of-living allowance were traditionally included as part of your earned income, even though those allowances weren't taxed.
This would put most military members over the annual income threshold of qualifying for the earned income credit," Captain Payne said.

"Also non-taxable combat pay is no longer included in your annual earned income. If someone was gone to the desert for a significant period of time then his or her annual income is going to be significantly smaller which may better qualify him or her for earned income credit," she said.

"Your best chances of qualifying are if you're a couple filing jointly with two children have an annual income threshold of around $39,000," Captain Payne said.

There are six different income thresholds based on the structure and employment status of each family as well as the number of children included in the family.

The earned income credit is a law that was created to give tax breaks to working families. It's a refundable credit meaning that even if you have no tax liability -- in other words, you don't owe taxes for the year and you're scheduled to receive back everything you paid out over the calendar year, you can still qualify to receive earned income credit on top of the money that was withheld throughout the year. The maximum amount of income credit being paid out is $4,716.

"The last thing that's important to know is that it's difficult for the tax office to estimate how much people will receive on their return without using a certain type of software because there are many variables that affect what you qualify for," Captain Payne said.

"That said, we encourage people to come to us and we'll help them understand exactly how much they qualify for," she said.

Other mandates for earned income credit
qualification:

-- You cannot file
"married, filing separately" to qualify for earned income credit.
Partners must file jointly.

-- Both partners filing jointly and all claimed children must possess a U.S. issued social security number.

-- If you have a foreign spouse, he or she must possess a U.S. issued social security number (not an "ITIN"
-- Individual Tax Identification Number).

-- You have to have lived in the U.S. for at least six months out of the year.

-- Military assigned to overseas bases qualify for 6 months U.S. occupancy.

-- Civilians working at overseas bases do not qualify for U.S. occupancy.

The exchange was part of a California State Partnership Program exchange between the California National Guard and Nigerian air force. According to the California National Guard Office of International Affairs' website, the SPP brings the other partner country's officers to the United States for information sharing to assist with its armed forces re-structuring, modernization, and strengthening principles of democracy and free market economies. The California National Guard has partnered with both Nigeria and Ukraine.

"I want to express our heartfelt gratitude to the American government and the commander of the 129 Rescue Wing for making the tour an enlightening one," Group Captain Igwe said. "We're very grateful for this partnership program and hope it continues."

"Everybody here was happy to help and interested in providing answers," said Capt. Mike Sampognero, 129th Maintenance Officer. "The Nigerians were very interested in the integrated maintenance data systems, our computerization of maintenance records." The Nigerians hope to acquire the same type of system through their own government.

and 129th SFS

In late January 2008, the NGB notified the 129th Security Forces they were selected as one of the two 2007 ANG Security Forces Units of the Year.

As the selection committee narrowed the competition from over 85 eligible SFS units to 19, the 129 SFS along with Illinois' 183rd SFS, were selected as the ANG Security Forces Units of the Year.

The winning unit will compete against the Security Forces Reserve Unit of the Year for the Air Reserve Command Unit of the Year.

The National Guard Bureau named the 129th SFS Outstanding Security Forces Squadron of the Year in 2005 and 2006.

Varied and numerous deployments, along with constant training and outstanding leadership within their ranks, keeps this motivated squadron in the upper echelon of Air Force standards and spirit.

News and notes

Citibank wins GTC contract

On January 15, 2008, the Department of Defense (DoD) awarded the tailored task order under the General Services Administration (GSA) SmartPay® 2 contract to Citibank. The award announcement was made by Sheila M. Earle, Principal Director, Military Personnel Policy and Acting Director, Defense Travel Management Office (DTMO).

The DTMO, which provides oversight of the DoD travel charge card program, has been preparing for this award for over a year. The new travel charge cards provided by Citibank will support the mission needs of over 1.2 million travel charge cardholders in DoD.

The estimated value of the DoD travel card task order over a 10-year period is $40 billion, based on projected travel card spending. DTMO travel card program managers have been working closely with the Services and Agencies to ensure that requirements meet high DoD standards. DoD travelers will continue to benefit from the travel card through ATM cash advances, insurance benefits, delayed late fees and the convenience of using a charge card as opposed to purchasing via personal funds or credit card(s).

Under this new task order, current DoD travel charge cards issued by Bank of America will deactivate on November 29, 2008 and the new travel charge cards issued by Citibank will activate on November 30, 2008.

Keep OPSEC in mind, even online

Operational security is important at any time. Two of the most popular free social-networking sites are MySpace and Facebook.

Personal information combined with information on what you do, where you do it and where you are going next can be very dangerous. A person who is looking for sensitive information can piece together small bits in order to complete a larger picture.

Any information can be sensitive, particularly information that relates to the mission of an active-duty member's unit. Family members who have profiles on public Web sites should also be careful about the information they post about their active-duty sponsors.

Rescuegram Deadline

We want to hear from you! Please submit your articles, notices, photographs or story ideas to us.

Please send them to drew.hughan@camoff.af.mil and jill.jamgochian@camoff.af.mil by 1000 Sunday of drill. The Rescuegram is edited during drill one month in advance of the print date.
