Rescuers home from Afghanistan

by Capt. Alyson M. Teeter
129th Rescue Wing Public Affairs

MOFFETT FEDERAL AIRFIELD, Calif. -- Relieved families, friends and co-workers, patriots on motorcycles, local firefighters and media surrounded the group of rescuers as they arrived here from a four-month deployment Sept. 9.

It was a welcome sight as the 129th Rescue Wing Airmen returned home from an intense combat deployment to Afghanistan where they rescued 187 injured people, including coalition forces, local nationals and sister service members.

In May nearly 70 members of the 129th RQW began their incredible journey of saving lives in southern Afghanistan. HH-60G Pave Hawk helicopter crew members, maintainers and support personnel from the 129th provided 24-hour rescue alert at Kandahar Airfield and Camp Bastion in the Helmand province.

Half of the 129th Expeditionary Rescue Squadron was comprised of Airmen from the 129th RQW based here, but also included personnel from active duty and reserve units from around the world, including rescue squadrons from Moody Air Force Base, Ga., Kadena Air Base, Japan, and Nellis AFB, Nev.

During the deployment the 129th ERQS was in charge of battlefield combat medical evacuation, or medevac, of all joint, coalition, and Afghan National forces operating within Regional Command South, Afghanistan, according to Lt. Col. Rhys Hunt, commander of the 129th ERQS and the 129th Rescue Squadron's director of operations. The 129th ERQS also routinely provided time critical lifesaving medical attention to Afghan citizens who were either wounded by enemy fighters or simply injured in everyday incidents.

This rescue task – personnel recovery – differed from traditional past missions. Instead of being on alert to save downed U.S. Air Force pilots, the 129th ERQS was responsible for saving whoever needed immediate medical attention.

The 129th was split between two locations – Kandahar Airfield and Camp Bastion.

Wing updates on-base motorcycle requirements

by Senior Master Sgt. Alan Lyvere, 129th Rescue Wing Safety Office

To comply with the California Adjutant General's policy on motorcycle safety, changes will be made to the 129th Rescue Wing's motorcycle policy effective the October UTA.

These requirements are mandatory for all California Military Department service members in any duty status, including AGR, ADSW, Title 32, SAD, ESAD, IDT, ADT, Federal Technician, FTM, FTNG, CSMR on SAD.

- Headlights will be on at all times.
- Helmet that meets or exceeds DOT standards fastened under the chin.

- ANSI rated goggles, wrap around glasses, or full-face shield (properly attached to helmet).
- Wearing of long sleeved shirt/jacket, long trousers, and full fingered gloves.

- Wear of sturdy over the ankle footwear is required, low quarter sneakers, and similar footwear is not allowed.

- Riders will wear brightly colored outer upper garment during the day and a reflective upper garment during the night. Outer upper garment shall be visible and not covered. Backpacks are authorized if it has brightly colored or reflective properties.

All members must complete an MSF course as soon as time and class space permits to continue to be allowed to drive on base.

When the Macon Gate is manned by 129th Security Forces Squadron personnel, noncompliance will result in SFS personnel stopping members at the Macon Gate entrance and having the member park their motorcycle in the gravel parking area by the Ellis Gate. Drivers not in compliance cannot proceed any further than the Macon Gate.

If during the week members are caught driving on base in violation of the new rules, unit members will be issued a warning for the first offense with further administrative action taken for each subsequent violation.

Stationed closer to the combat zones, the unit improved its response time to meet the Secretary of Defense’s mandate to recover critically injured patients from anywhere on the battlefield in less than one hour, which is known as “the golden hour.”

The 129th shared medevac alert at Kandahar Airfield with the 82nd Combat Aviation Regiment based out of Fort Bragg, N.C. “We got everything from high-priority combat casualties, such as IED blasts, troops-in-contact, and gunshot wounds, to routine transfers between medical facilities,” Colonel Hunt said.

At Camp Bastion, the unit was paired with the British Joint Helicopter Force-Afghanistan and its CH-47 Chinook airborne surgical team.

“The guys out there were doing four to eight missions per day at Camp Bastion, and to say the conditions are austere is an understatement,” Colonel Hunt said. “Temps routinely hit 115 degrees with less than one mile visibility due to the dust.”

“We were closely tied to the fight there and worked particularly well extracting wounded UK soldiers from the high-threat Green Zone,” he added.

Speedy and efficient maintenance on the Pave Hawks at both locations was also critical to saving lives, according to Capt. Michael Vandermeiden, maintenance supervisor for the 129th ERQS and commander of the 129th Maintenance Operations Flight. He managed the HH-60G maintenance at both Kandahar and Camp Bastion.

“The key to our success was teamwork because we were on alert around the clock and had to launch aircraft within 30 minutes,” Captain Vandermeiden said. “Ops would communicate a potential mission to maintenance, which would kick the alert crews out to the aircraft to start the launch process. This allowed ops to run and jump into the aircraft, and go.”

“We set the standard for launching aircraft early,” he said. “A quicker launch saved people’s lives.” The maintainers faced many hurdles in keeping the aircraft flying. “Browning out” was a common occurrence that happens when the helicopter lands and sand and dirt envelope the aircraft. The engines would suck in the dirt and consequently trigger engine problems.

“At one point in July our maintenance team changed four engines in a week – three in 36 hours,” Colonel Hunt said. “I was impressed with their level of motivation in such arduous conditions.”

Although the members of the 129th ERQS faced risks and challenges on a daily basis, the team united to perform their honorable mission successfully and come home safe without any casualties.

“We have enough stories of heinous brownouts, IED strikes, bullet holes, and Soldiers that lived to fight another day, to last a lifetime,” Colonel Hunt said. “I don’t mean to overstate this, but this deployment has been unlike any that I have experienced in my 15 years as a rescue pilot.”

What motivated you to enlist in the AF?

I was an Army Ranger deployed in 2003 to Afghanistan where I was stationed at Bagram Air Base. Being a Ranger we got to hang out with the pararescue team, specifically two 129th PJs. I talked to one of the PJs about his job, the mission and what life was like. I was then ready to switch jobs and join the Guard.

How has being an Airman changed your outlook on life?

Not until you've actually worked toward something as valuable and important as civil service and something that you consider greater than yourself, like a rescue mission, do you tend to appreciate what you get after the fact. After getting out of the Army, switching jobs and getting in to the Guard, I've had the opportunity to enjoy everything that I've worked for.

If you could choose any AF job, which would it be?

I switched branches, went through a completely separate, mind and body crushing hard indoctrination to be here. I almost lost rank, almost had to re-do basic training and have been the same rank for the past eight years because of this job, but I wouldn't have it any other way. I love my job.

What is your job in the civilian world?

Before joining the Army I was a lifeguard, fitness instructor and personal trainer. Since joining 129th, I attended UCLA as a history major and graduated this summer.

What would people be surprised to know about you?

I want to write a book. Right now I'm just regurgitating stories from all the times that I can remember being in the military, I'd like it to end up a book, but it needs form and a clear argument. The stories mostly regard my faith while in the military, focusing on my Ranger unit consisting of an atheist, a Mormon, a Christian, and a Buddhist and our religious discussions.

What are your hobbies?

I play the guitar and I enjoy singing as well, usually on camping trips. I'm currently teaching myself to play the piano; I'm also pretty good with any instrument with strings.

Portrait of a Professional is a monthly profile of an outstanding Staff Sgt. and below. Nominations are routed through the squadron and group commanders.

Ask a trainee...

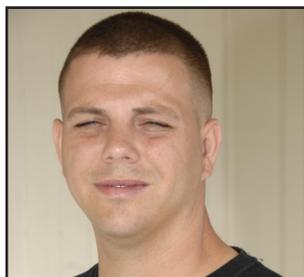

Look, you're only new once. This column is in place to get to know those newest Guardsmen to join the 129th family. The responses are genuine, and have only been edited for space and to correct errors.

What are your military goals?

A1C Jimmy Bruce Panyanouvong (C-130 crew chief)

"My military goal is to work for 20 years. I like the 129th RQW. Everyone is (part of a) family-oriented unit. It's been great to get help from the unit."

A1C William Helton (HH-60 crew chief)

"I just want to be a part of a group of people that functions as a working force and has the same cause: to serve and protect all of the people of our world."

A1C Elizabeth Cunningham (CF)

"Eventually I would like to use the training I get to get a good job and finish school. After that, I would like to be a JAG or civilian-side lawyer."

A1C Avery Gustamante (Security Forces)

"My number one goal in the military is to serve my country. Whether that would be to assist in natural disasters, fires, volunteer work, or deployment, I'm willing to take on the task. After BMT and tech school, I'm hoping to volunteer for deployment as soon as possible."

VA returning vets Web site

The Veterans Affairs Department has launched a new Web site to welcome home veterans of the Iraq and Afghanistan conflicts with a social, veteran-centric site at <http://www.oefoif.va.gov>. It focuses on the needs and questions of returning veterans, featuring information on benefits and veterans' stories.

KTVU wants to know your stories

by Capt. Alyson M. Teeter
129th Rescue Wing Public Affairs

In April KTVU Fox 2 and KICU TV 36 began airing a television news vignette series called "Operation Salute." It was designed to showcase Bay Area-based military personnel and their families on local television.

"Our intention is to appreciate, salute, and honor local military personnel who are positively contributing to our local community," said Rosy Chu, KTVU Community Affairs director and Bay Area People host.

According to Ms. Chu, the KTVU stories focus on individuals who combine their civilian lives and/or military careers to bring service to the greater community.

"So many of us are not aware of the many contributions military personnel bring to our every day lives and of how they contribute to our quality of life," she added.

Since the project's inception, three wing personnel have been featured on Operation Salute - Lt. Col. Steve Butow, 129th Operations Group deputy commander, Senior Master Sgt. Chris Underwood, 129th Human Resources Advisor, and Staff Sgt. Monique Rivera, unit trainer for the 129th Security Forces Squadron.

You can view their segments, along with others, at <http://www.ktvu.com/operationsalute/index.html>.

If selected to participate, a KTVU television crew will interview the military member, film them doing their job, and if applicable film them in their civilian life. The 129th public affairs office also assists in coordinating the filming.

If you would like to nominate someone from 129th Rescue Wing, please contact the 129th Rescue Wing public affairs office at 603-9152 or public.affairs@camoff.ang.af.mil.

County Park 'Perks'

In 2007 the Santa Clara County Board of Supervisors approved a program that grants Annual Vehicle Entry Passes to California National Guard members in pay grades E-4 or below for parks operated by Santa Clara County. Servicemembers must reside in Santa Clara County.

There is a one-time administrative fee of $4. Each family may receive one pass per year. Download the application at www.sccgov.org/SCC/docs%2FParks%20and%20Recreation%2C%20Department%20of%20%28DEP%29%2FAttachments%2FAnnual_Pass_for_Military_Form_8.pdf.

Because verification of eligibility status must be made, passes can only be obtained through the Parks Department Administration Office at 298 Garden Hill Drive, Los Gatos 95032.

"Perks" is a section created for wing members to share benefits that came to them because they were in the Guard. To submit your "Perk," send an email to public.affairs@camoff.ang.af.mil.
